SNAKES ON THINGS RHYMING WITH 'PLANE'

Even Before the Movie, This Would Have Been News

Railway officials in Hanoi, Vietnam, recently discovered snakes on a train — highly venomous king cobras under a seat. Passengers were terrified when four cloth bags containing the writhing cobras were spotted Friday. The exact number of snakes was unclear, but the bags weighed 100 pounds. The cobras were given to forest rangers, who released them into the wild. (AP)

Obama Finishes Security Overhaul

President taps Army Gen. Dempsey to lead Joint Chiefs of Staff

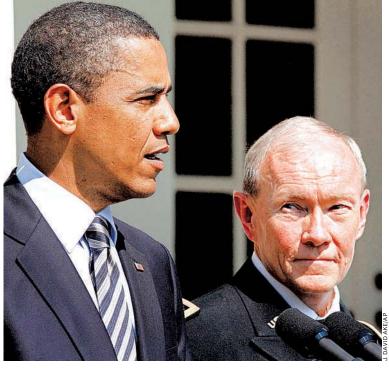

Washington

President Obama moved Monday to complete an overhaul of his national security team, selecting Army Gen. Martin Dempsey as the next Joint Chiefs of Staff chairman amid a protracted battle in Afghanistan, U.S. involvement in the NATO-led effort against Libya's Moammar Gadhafi and a winding down of the war in Iraq.

Obama announced a new lineup of his top military leadership group in the Rose Garden of the White House just before venturing across the Potomac to pay tribute to the nation's war dead at Arlington National Cemetery. The Memorial Day announcements had been expected, although there was no immediate indication what the military leadership moves might imply for possible changes in military strategy.

Already, the president had turned, in late April, to CIA Director Leon Panetta to succeed Robert Gates as secretary of defense and chose to move Army Gen. David Petraeus from his command of the Afghanistan war effort to the United States to replace Panetta at the CIA.

Marine Gen. James Cartwright had long been rumored to be Obama's

Mullen Confident in Strategy

Appearing in a nationally broadcast interview Monday morning, Adm. Mike Mullen was asked whether a change of guard for the Joint Chiefs of Staff meant a change of strategy in Afghanistan. "We obviously have added these forces ... and we've really seen progress on the security side," he replied. "We will sustain losses. ... That said, I am confident that by the end of the year, we'll be in a much, much better position." (AP) favorite, and the president singled him out for praise at the announcement. But he turned instead to Dempsey, an accomplished veteran of the Iraq war, to succeed Adm. Mike Mullen as his top military adviser, calling Dempsey "one of our nation's most respected and combat-tested generals."

The president also announced he has chosen Navy Adm. James Winnefeld to succeed Cartwright as vice chairman of the Joint Chiefs and Army Gen. Ray Odierno as his candidate to replace Dempsey as Army chief of staff.

The nominees have to be approved by the Senate, and Obama voiced hope that could happen in a timely fashion. DARLENE SUPERVILLE AND ROBERT BURNS (AP)

Closing Retirement Tax Breaks Won't Aid Budget

Washington

As Washington considers closing a profusion of tax breaks in its quest to reduce record budget deficits, a new study suggests that some targets might produce far less cash than is commonly thought.

Tax preferences for retirement plans, such as 401(k) accounts, rank among the biggest money losers for the federal government, with official projections showing a loss of about $600 billion to federal coffers over the next five years. But a study set for release this week suggests that the accounts would have to be closed entirely, or contributions sharply limited, to realize much in the way of budget savings — a move that could undermine some of the nation's most popular retirement tools. "Given the questions about the future of Social Security, this is no time to be making bad policy decisions about private savings," said Brian Graff, executive director of the American Society of Pension Professionals and Actuaries, which conducted the study. Serbia Renews Push for EU Talks

Tadic: Bloc's demand for capture of war crimes suspect met

Belgrade, Serbia

Serbian President Boris Tadic said Monday it's time the European Union did its part by boosting his nation's efforts to join the bloc, arguing the arrest of war crimes suspect Ratko Mladic proves it is serious about rejoining the international fold.

Tadic also rejected speculation that authorities had known of Mladic's hiding place but delayed his arrest to coincide with a visit by EU foreign policy chief Catherine Ashton. The rumors have persisted because Mladic was found living not far from the capital, Belgrade, with relatives who share his last name.

"The truth is that we arrested Ratko Mladic the moment we discovered him," Tadic said.

Europe's most wanted war crimes fugitive, Mladic, was arrested Thursday after 16 years on the run. He is charged by a U.N. war crimes court for atrocities committed by his troops during Bosnia's 1992-95 war.

But Tadic said he wants the international community to recogtion it arrested the wartime Bosnian Serb commander. Some EU nations have already said Serbia needs to do more, including arresting its last fugitive, Goran Hadzic, who led Croatian Serb rebels during the 1991-95 war. Hadzic is accused of the murder of hundreds of Croat civilians and the deportation of 28,000 people.

Ratko Mladic, 69, was indicted on 15 counts of war crimes for atrocities committed during the Bosnian

War of 1992-95. He is held responsible for ordering the Sarajevo Massacre, in which about 8,000 Bosnians were killed, and the 43-month siege of Sarajevo, in which 10,000 civilians perished. Mladic's lawyer said Monday he has formally filed an appeal against the former general's extradition — a move that will likely delay his handover for at least a day. (AP)

Serbia will "arrest Mr. Hadzic in the next few weeks, a month, the year ahead of us," Tadic said.

Serbia, once considered a pariah nation because of its late president Slobodan Milosevic's warmongering policies and for harboring war crimes suspects, now expects pre-candidacy status by the end of the year.

Tadic said that Serbia should be given the same path to membership accorded to another former Yugoslav republic, Croatia.

"There are no obstacles left," he said. "Stopping Serbia would be purely political." (AP)

Unrest Escalates In Divided Yemen

Government begins airstrikes amid a surging crackdown

San'a, Yemen

Yemeni forces opened fire on a protest camp and killed more than 20 demonstrators Monday in the southern city of Taiz while government warplanes launched airstrikes on another southern town seized by radical Islamists.

The new attempts to suppress the uprising against President Ali Abdullah Saleh with overwhelming force pointed to the leader's increasingly tenuous grip on power.

More than three months of mass street protests have posed an unprecedented threat to Saleh's 33-year rule, and the U.S. has moved away from its former ally despite fears that his fall could leave room in this rugged corner of the Arabian Peninsula for an active al-Qaeda franchise or other militant Islamist groups to take power.

Saleh has responded to protest-

Backstory

Yemen's unrest has increased dramatically in the past week, as a U.S.-backed mediation effort for Saleh to leave power in exchange for immunity from prosecution failed. Five days of battles in the capital, San'a, between Saleh's security forces and tribesmen left 124 people dead before the sides reached a tenuous cease-fire, and a group of nine high-level military leaders over the weekend urged all army units to help topple the president. ers who say they seek democratic reforms with a mix of promised concessions and bloody crackdowns.

The airstrikes were the government's hardest hit yet against the Islamists since hundreds of them streamed in Friday, seizing banks and government buildings. Military units battled them overnight and into Monday.

The U.S. Embassy in San'a condemned Monday's attack as "unprovoked and unjustified." (AP)

Metro Honors Station Manager

27-year employee gets award for thwarting 2 suicide tries in system

Landover, Md.

It isn't often that a Metro station manager stops a person from jumping in front of a train. For Timothy Lee, it's happened twice in just more than a year, most recently in April, when he stopped a young woman who had been dangling her legs from the platform at Landover Station.

Last week, Metro's top officials awarded the 27-year employee a plaque for his actions.

"What he did was heroic," said Lynn Bowersox, Metro's managing director of public relations. "He spotted her, understood her actions and had the instinct that she might be in harm's way and stopped her. It is absolutely extraordinary."

Lee, 50, was in the station's kiosk about to do a routine check along the platform. He looked at a security camera and noticed a young woman walking along the edge of the platform.

Lee, who has worked at Landover for three years, said he'd seen people do that before, so he wasn't immediately alarmed and thought he'd simply ask her to step away from the edge.

Railcars Blamed

Metro's Breda 4000 Series of railcars is being blamed for delays in train service. At a board committee meeting last week, board member Tom Downs said the railcar series is hurting on-time performance and called for the agency to fix the railcars or get rid of them. The 4000 Series has Metro's worst record for breakdowns that cause delays. (AP)

But when he got on the platform, she was dangling her legs over the track. Lee yelled for her to get up, but she got on all fours as if positioning herself to jump. Lee said he then gingerly approached her.

"I knew once I hollered towards her to get up and she totally ignored me that I had a problem," he said.

Lee said he grabbed her arm and pulled her back just as a train pulled into the station.

"When I grabbed her, she was lifeless," Lee said. "She had no emotion."

Lee called Metro's operations center and Metro Transit Police. Police arrived quickly and took the woman to an area hospital.

Metro officials reported five suicides in 2008, 10 in 2009 and seven last year. DANA HEDGPETH (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Teen Crime Trend Shifts

D.C. juveniles target smartphones, are less likely to steal vehicles

Washington

For teenagers who commit crimes in the District, stealing cars is out. Snatching smartphones directly from victims' hands or breaking into their homes is in.

On average, juveniles were arrested for violent robberies or carjackings at least once a day last year, an almost 50 percent increase from 2007. During the same time, juvenile arrests for riding in stolen cars, a nonviolent crime, dropped by more than 60 percent.

The increase of violent crime arrests of D.C. youths last year compared to 2007. In 2010, teens made up 23 percent of all violent crime arrests.

The shift is a troubling indicator that the city's youngest offenders are growing more aggressive and confrontational: Last year, teens made up 23 percent of all violent crime arrests, more than double the percentage in 2003.

"A number of years ago, car theft was off the scale. It was cool to get a car and joyride," said Daniel Okonkwo, executive director of DC Lawyers for Youth. "Now it's an iPhone 4, an iPod. Things you can't afford when you don't have money."

This year, juveniles account for 7 percent of overall arrests in the city — but about 45 percent of all arrests for robbery and carjacking, and 35 percent of burglary arrests, said D.C. Police Chief Cathy L. Lanier.

Teens have represented 6 percent to 8 percent of total arrests in the District for the past five years.

Teens are breaking into houses more than ever, according to police, contributing to a 14 percent jump in home break-ins across the city. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Washing of the Dead At the Vietnam Wall

Washington

In the early morning, just as the sun breaks over the Capitol dome, a small group of volunteers gathers at the black granite Vietnam Veterans Memorial, that heart-breaking slash in the earth by the Lincoln Memorial on the Mall.

They quietly hook up hoses, attach nozzles and spray down the wall, removing a week's worth of dust, dirt and debris. Then they fill up buckets with a mild detergent, switch to soft brushes and, starting on either end of the wall, begin to scrub. Countless fingerprints, smears and tears have accumulated since the last wash, a week ago.

"I have 11 buddies on that wall, including my best friend from high school," said Steve Nelson, of District Heights, who served in the Army in Vietnam. He was turning on the water this month after the hoses were unkinked and extended.

"It's not intense.

... There's a lot of camaraderie."

- NEW THANYACHAREON, THE PARK SERVICE RANGER WHO COORDINATES THE VOLUNTEER CLEANUP EFFORT.

The washing of the dead, with its religious resonances, arose out of frustration. In 1998, dissatisfied with the job that the National Park Service was doing and upset that bird droppings had filled in some of the engraved names, Jan Scruggs, of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, took action. He handed 37 toothbrushes to visiting vets from Wisconsin, who scrubbed the filth away.

Jeff Mozingo helps clean the Vietnam Veterans Memorial on Sunday morning.

Each year after the cherry blossoms are past, until the first snowfall, the volunteers turn up on Saturdays and Sundays at 6:30 a.m., long before tourists arrive. The work takes less than an hour. Many military veterans are among the regular volunteers, but there are also church groups, Boy Scouts, college sorority sisters and union members.

"You're one of the few people in the park early in the morning," said New Thanyachareon, the Park Service ranger who is the volunteer coordinator. "It's not intense, not hard. There's a lot of camaraderie." (THE WASHINGTON POST)

With Japan's crisis in mind, Germany hurries to cut its ties with nuclear power

Berlin

Europe's economic powerhouse, Germany, is to abandon nuclear energy over the next 11 years — drawing up an ambitious plan in the wake of Japan's Fukushima disaster to replace atomic power with renewable energy sources.

Chancellor Angela Merkel said Monday she hopes the transformation to more solar, wind and hydroelectric power becomes a test case for other countries.

"We believe that we can show those countries who decide to abandon nuclear power — or not to start using it — how it is possible to achieve growth, creating jobs and economic prosperity while shifting the energy supply toward renewable energies," Merkel said.

Merkel's government announced Monday that it will shut down all of the 17 nuclear power plants in Germany the world's fourth-largest economy and Europe's biggest — by 2022.

The country's seven oldest reactors, already taken off the grid pending safety inspections after the March catastrophe at Japan's Fukushima Dai-ichi nuclear power plant, will remain offline permanently, Merkel said.

The decision completed a remarkable about-face for Merkel's center-right government, which only late last year pushed through a plan to extend the life span of the country's 17 reactors by an average of 12 years — with the last scheduled to go offline around 2036.

But Merkel, who holds a Ph.D. in physics, now says industrialized, technologically advanced Japan's "helplessness" in the face of the Fukushima

 $Anti-nuclear \, activists \, escalated \, their \, protests \, in \, Germany \, after \, the \, March \, 11 \, ts unami \, and \, nuclear \, crisis \, in \, Japan.$

The Case Against

Nuclear is unsafe: Accidents are hard to predict and have far-reaching consequences, compounded by the fact that most reactors are near major population centers — Moscow, Chicago, Los Angeles, Kiev — making it nearly impossible to evacuate people in a timely fashion.

It can't be disposed of safely:

Operators still store spent fuel and other nuclear waste in and around reactors, since no secure permanent repository has been built. In the U.S., 70,000 tons of spent fuel sits at 103 reactors across the country.

It's expensive: A typical reactor, based on the French industry, costs a minimum of $6 billion. That doesn't include waste disposal, fuel costs or the costs of remediating such accidents as Chernobyl.

The Case For

Nuclear is safe: Commercial nuclear power plants in the United States have produced electricity for more than half a century, and there have been no radiation-related deaths linked to their operation.

It's reliable: On average, 104 nuclear power plants in the U.S. operate more than 90 percent of the time. In comparison, hydro, wind and solar power have average capacity factors in the range of 24 to 30 percent.

It's efficient: A 1,000-megawatt nuclear power plant operating 90 percent of the time generates enough electricity to power 740,000 homes. It would take 13.7 million barrels of oil, 3.4 million short tons of coal or 65.8 billion cubic feet of natural gas to achieve the same result, according to government data. (csm) disaster made her rethink the technology's risks.

Last fall, Merkel had called for Germany to get 80 percent of its electricity from renewable sources by 2050. Monday's announcement increases the pressure to make that happen faster.

"We also want to reduce our CO2 emissions by 40 percent and double our share of renewable energies, from about 17 percent today to then 35 percent," the chancellor said.

Though environmental groups welcomed Germany's plan, it received a skeptical reception abroad.

French Prime Minister Francois Fillon — whose country relies on nuclear power to produce 80 percent of its electricity supply — insisted "there's no way" for the European Union to meet its emission-cutting targets without at least some use of nuclear power.

"We respect this decision, but it doesn't cause us to change our policy," Fillon said. France operates more than one-third of the nuclear reactors in the EU.

Swedish Environment Minister Andreas Carlgren also criticized the decision, saying that the focus on an end date was unfortunate and could increase electricity prices across Europe.

Hans-Peter Keitel, the president of the Federation of German Industries, urged Germany not to set the exit date of 2022 in stone.

Germany's decision came after a 17-member nuclear ethics panel, which included a Roman Catholic bishop and industrial and scientific leaders, recommended a "10-year exit corridor" to go nuclear-free. But the report, released Monday, said weaning Germany off nuclear power won't be successful "without efforts of all segments of the political, business and societal world." THE NBA FINALS

Decisions, Decisions, Decisions

LeBron James chose to sign with the Miami Heat to be in this position: playing for his first NBA championship

LeBron James walked through the tunnel leading from the Miami Heat locker room Monday, stepped onto the court and gave a yell. He looked down at the NBA Finals logo newly affixed on the floor, smiled and nodded.

With that, it became real. His championship chance — the biggest reason he came to Miami - has finally arrived.

Swept out of his only other finals

9P.M. | ABC Tuesday

appearance four years ago, James will get his long-awaited second opportunity starting Tuesday night, when the Heat hosts the Dallas Mavericks in Game 1 of the NBA's title series. After a year like no other in his life, starting with the muchcriticized "Decision," his jerseys' being torched in Cleveland and the intense scrutiny of his every move, the last challenge will likely prove to be the toughest of them all.

"I'm honored to be here once again," said James, who led the Cavaliers to the 2007 finals. "Now with this franchise, it's an honor. As players, we worked hard. I worked hard individually to get to this point. And I had a lot of visions of being in this moment, and now it's hit me. ... I'm very excited."

LeBron James vs. Shawn Marion, Quickly swept aside in his lone finals appearance, James has done everything it takes to give himself another shot, from clutch 3-pointers to timely defensive stops against the opponents' top offensive player. The versatile Marion's insertion into the starting lineup allowed the Mavericks to overcome the season-ending loss of Caron Butler in January. EDGE: Heat.

It showed Monday. He chatted with teammates, taking part in a long shooting contest with Dwyane Wade, Eddie House and others, looking perfectly comfortable as dozens of photographers clicked away for 30-straight minutes. By now, being in the microscope is an accepted part of the deal for James, who has been dealing with this since his high school days.

Away from the court, though, his focus is even sharper than usual, according to those who are around the two-time NBA MVP. Winning a title likely won't change perceptions about James. His fans will surely remain fans and his critics will surely remain critics, no matter what happens. But to him, a championship would mean everything that took place since 9:27 p.m. on July 8, 2010 — the moment he publicly said he would join the Heat — was all worthwhile.

"He's focused," Wade said. "Obviously, we all want it. But in a different sense, he wants this; he wants to seize this moment."

He's been that way since July.

When the Heat threw that muchmaligned signing party for Wade, James and Chris Bosh — an idea that was born from the team hoping to simply welcome Wade back to Miami, those organizing the event never knowing it would be James and Bosh sharing the stage with him until less than 24 hours before the bash began James talked about winning title after title after title.

With that, the bar was set. "He's been zoned in, and he has that killer instinct that is warranted for the playoffs," Heat center Jamaal Magloire said. "You can see that he's willing to do whatever it takes to win." TIM REYNOLDS (AP)

Name Γhat

If you're an NBA fan. you'll hear the name American Airlines a lot over the next few weeks. American slapped its name on the arenas of both teams playing in the NBA finals back when stadium naming rights were a hot commodity—the American Airlines Arena in Miami and the American Airlines Center in Dallas. So whether the Miami Heat or the Dallas Mavericks win the title. American figures to get a lot of ${\sf TV}$ time. The same thing happened in 2006, when the Heat defeated the Mayericks in six games, American bought the naming rights to those arenas a decade ago. According to reports, American agreed to pay \$195 million over 30 years for the Dallas rights and \$42 million over 20 years in Miami. (AP)

Matchups

POWER FORWARD: Chris Bosh vs. Dirk Nowitzki. Nowitzki is having as good a postseason as anyone, scoring 28.4 points per game and shooting nearly 52 percent from the field. Bosh occasionally found it tough understanding his role as the No. 3 behind LeBron James and Dwyane Wade but has it figured out now. EDGE: Mavericks.

SHOOTING GUARD: Dwyane Wade vs. DeShawn Stevenson, Wade wrecked Dallas' first finals appearance, averaging 34.7 points and winning MVP honors. Stevenson is a good defender and will hit an occasional 3-pointer. EDGE: Heat.

CENTER: Joel Anthony vs.

Tyson Chandler. Chandler gives the Mavs an interior defensive presence they long lacked, and he can score some. Anthony can give the Heat a timely rebound or blocked shot, but he provides little offensively. EDGE: Mavericks.

POINT GUARD: Mike Bibby vs. Jason

Kidd. Bibby rarely has been a factor since joining the Heat and lacks the speed to take advantage of the 38-year-old Kidd, who has played terrific defense to give himself a third try at a ring.

EDGE: Mavericks. (AP)

Nationals Find a Different Way to Lose

3 home runs against Phillies' Halladay go for naught in defeat

The Nationals

Untouchable here, unparalleled everywhere else, Roy Halladay stood on the Nationals Park mound Monday afternoon and struck an unfamiliar pose. He was looking up and over his shoulder, watching the flight of another one of his pitches scorched toward the seats. Since he joined the Philadelphia Phillies, Halladay had owned the Nationals. Now, as Laynce Nix's home run stole the lead, they were playing home run derby against him.

The stunning development, by the end of their 5-4 loss in front of 34,789, yielded to a infuriating question: What must the Nationals do to beat the Phillies? They had smoked three home runs and smacked 10 hits off the best pitcher on the planet. Livan Hernandez had allowed three runs in 6 1/3 innings when he exited. They did not make an error. And still, the Nationals lost to the Phillies for the sixth-straight time, their 33rd defeat against Philadelphia in the past 43 meetings.

The Nationals, after Michael Morse, Danny Espinosa and Nix drilled solo homers off Halladay, lost the game with their bullpen and on the basepaths.

Sean Burnett replaced Hernandez with one out in the seventh inning with the Nationals up 4-3.

Burnett walked Chase Utley and Ryan Howard followed with a runscoring single to tie the game. Raul

Teddy Fails Again

Of the many possibilities on a blazing Monday, Teddy Roosevelt's winning the Presidents Race ranked as more likely than the Nationals' tattooing Phillies ace Roy Halladay. While the Nats did get to Halladay, Teddy's day didn't come — again. Despite rumors Teddy would finally win the race, Abe Lincoln won the day. Teddy has yet to win the between-inning attraction. (EXPRESS)

College Lacrosse

A month ago, the Virginia men's lacrosse team suspended two starting midfielders for a violation of team rules. One of them was a two-time first-team all-American. Two months ago, the team's best defenseman was lost for the year after shoulder surgery.

On Monday, Virginia won its fifth national title, this one following a 9-7 victory over Maryland in the championship game before 35,000 fans at M&T Bank Stadium in Baltimore.

Virginia's Colin Briggs is congratulated after scoring a goal in Monday's final.

Perhaps appropriately, Virginia (13-5) set a record for most losses by an NCAA champion. Yet it didn't matter to the team nor to its fans, who were greatly outnumbered on Monday by fans of Maryland (13-5).

Redshirt junior Colin Briggs finished with five goals for Virginia. He had been suspended for a semifinal victory over Denver for what coach Dom Starsia called "a team matter."

Meantime, Maryland missed its chance for its first national title since 1975. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Tressel Resigns Amid Scandal At Ohio State

College Football

Jim Tressel, who guided Ohio State to its first national title in 34 years, resigned Monday amid NCAA violations from a tattoo-parlor scandal that sullied the image of one of the country's top football programs.

Luke Fickell will be the coach for the 2011 season. He already had been selected to be the interim coach while Tressel served a five-game suspension.

Clearly, the turmoil had been building. The resignation comes nearly three months after Ohio State suspended Tressel and fined him $250,000 for knowing his players had received improper benefits from a local tattoo-parlor owner. The school said at the time it was "very surprised and disappointed" in Tressel. (AP)

The key to enjoying summer in the city? Getting out of town. Here are four ideas for active adventures within driving distance.

Snow Day!

"In the summer, people don't think, 'Let's go skiing," says Drew Sherwood, general manager of Liberty Mountain Snowflex Centre. But that's exactly what the slopes covered with synthetic snow substitute are meant for in Lynchburg, Va., a 3½-hour drive from the District. The newest innovation is a lift and slope for tubing enthusiasts.

One bummer: You have to wear long sleeves and pants, because the surface has the texture of a doormat and can leave marks like rug burns on exposed skin.

Although it's run by Liberty University, which boasts the slogan "40 years of training champions for Christ," Sherwood promises the only lessons at the center are in skiing and snowboarding. "This is a vacation place," he says.

Get ready to go the extra mile. That's how long you're in the air when you do the new canopy tour, above, at Nelson Rocks Outdoor Center in Circleville, W.Va., about a $3\frac{1}{2}$ -hour drive away. The four-hour experience includes 12 zip lines, three sky bridges and a hike, all designed to provide a glorious glimpse of 400 million years of geology. Guides are there for safety and for education about the flora and fauna.

Or head just one hour away to Harpers Ferry, W.Va., where River Riders, a rafting and tubing company, launched another canopy tour. It's a shorter course with eight zip lines that participants can finish in about two hours. But it should still satisfy your adrenaline cravings.

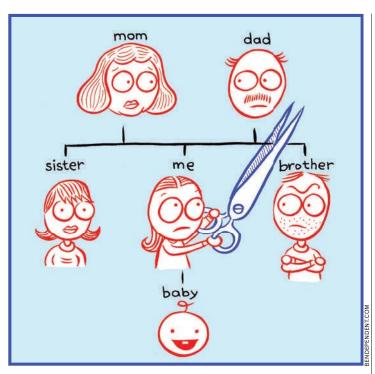

What's going to be hot this summer, other than the weather? Stand-up paddle-

Branch out by taking tree-climbing lessons. That's what Riverside Outfitters in Richmond, Va., about two hours from the District, offers, using safety techniques borrowed from professional arborists.

Staff members will happily show you the nitty-gritty of how they set up the safety system (which resembles rock-climbing gear) designed to keep you from tumbling to the ground. But if you're just into scrambling up toward the sky, don't worry about it. Simply enjoy the climb to the tops of red oaks, pretend you're Tarzan, and walk out on the limbs. When Brother Is a Bother

I'm pregnant and don't want my brother in my baby's life. He was abusive to me when we were growing up. Now, he's 26 and lives with my parents, who financially support him. I know it's assumed that when I have this baby, he will see it when they do, at least when we visit them. My husband says we should try to maintain peace, but I don't even need my baby to know he exists. OLDER SIS, VA

It's your child, and you and your husband have the right — and responsibility — to keep him or her safe. Keeping family peace is fine and good and makes for nice soup commercials, but if your brother is a toxic individual, then protection is more important than keeping feathers unruffled. Once the baby comes, you need not rush to visit, and if your brother wants to come with your parents, buy yourself time in those early months (not enough room, fear of germs).

Longer term, though, you'll need a more sustainable solution, whether it's deciding on re-evaluating the possibility of brief supervised visits or biting the bullet and letting him know how you feel.

Every Evening Isn't Fight Night

My boyfriend and I have been fighting all the time lately. It's always about stupid stuff. He comes home from work stressed and takes it out on me constantly. There are many things I love about him, and I see some of my married friends bickering and annoyed with their spouses. But I do wonder whether this is how it's supposed to be. CATS & DOES

Certainly, this is not auspicious. And I simply don't agree with the cynical and helpless mind-set that this is just what happens in long-term relationships. Fighting about stuff like whether mustard should be refrigerated, when it's this constant, is just as significant as bigger conflicts.

The real question here isn't whether this is unsatisfactory (it is), but whether it can be temporary. Might he be depressed? (Irritability and pessimism are classic signs.) Is he willing to search for new coping strategies and stress reduction techniques, if not talk to somebody? Might you both identify your triggers and work together to disengage from a conflict to cool down before it escalates? There are ways of working through this with motivation, patience and respect.

Rugby's Ben Cohen will combat bullying behavior with his new StandUp Foundation

Interview

You don't need to know a thing about rugby to be a fan of Ben Cohen. The 32-year-old English athlete, who retired from the sport this month, isn't just a World Cupwinning player — he's also a champion of gay rights.

It's an unusual position in the world of professional sports, and it's even more remarkable given that Cohen is a straight, married guy with two daughters. But when he discovered he'd developed a sizable following in the gay community, he embraced his fan base.

"It was flattering people found me attractive," says Cohen, who quickly learned that many of his devotees had dealt with years of bullying, which led to depression and worse for them.

"There are everlasting scars. For the rest of their lives, they can remember the smell of the room, the bully's name," he says.

He's decided to do something about it, launching the StandUp

Foundation to fight homophobic behavior.

Last week, he swung through Washington during his Acceptance Tour across the U.S. to start raising money and awareness about the issue. The message, he explains, is that people who tolerate bullyand a talk with the gay-straight alliance at Richard Montgomery High School in Rockville. He also managed to make one fan's day by auctioning off a one-on-one workout at Vida Fitness: Ross Yerger, a 39-year-old Secret Service agent, bid $600 for the opportunity. (See

"I used to work out with a Navy SEAL who said never to let your workout routine become just that," says Ross Yerger, a rugby fan who won the exercise session with Cohen. So the athlete introduced him to a new program: six sixes. It's six exercises (bench presses, cleans, squats, squat jumps, overhead presses, curls), six reps, six times. Exercise isn't the highest priority for Cohen these days, particularly because he's still nursing an injury from his final rugby match in April. ("I snapped my adductor off my groin. It felt like getting kicked in the nuts, and it bled everywhere," he says.)

But he's certain to keep running around the hills near his farm in the English countryside and to pursue physical interests he's put off. "I want to do marathons and other things I could never do as a rugby player," he says.

Before, he was training to score points. Now, he has a different goal: "I've got to keep fit to look halfway decent and not get too fat." Cohen knows his fans are counting on him. VICKY HALLETT (EXPRESS)

So You Think You Can't Dance?

Everybody can learn how to do the Batuka in just a few minutes

Activities

Only kids between the ages of 9 and 14 can compete in Hershey's Track & Field Games this Saturday (free.; 10 a.m.; Spingarn Senior High School, 2500 Benning Road NE; for more info, contact luna.harrison@dc.gov). But everybody will have a chance to participate.

That's because at 11:15 a.m. — right after the opening ceremonies — local certified American Council on Exercise (ACE) trainer Jonathan Ross will teach the Moderation Nation Batuka Dance, designed to get the whole crowd up on their feet and shaking it.

"There are a lot of people who don't like structured exercise and just want to move. With this, in four to five minutes, you get up, get moving and get a sweat going," Ross says.

The Latin-influenced steps will be familiar to anyone who's ever attended a Zumba class. They're a taste of the Batuka fitness program, a similar format designed to bring a party atmosphere to exercise. (It was just introduced to the U.S. ear-

Offering inclusive options is the purpose of Moderation Nation

(Themoderationnation.com), a collaboration between the Hershey Center for Health and Nutrition, ACE and the American Dietetic Association. "We're presenting the idea that activity is part of life and that there are so many ways to be active," says Ross, who worries that kids who aren't naturally athletic believe that exercise isn't for them. "We get kids into sports or nothing. We need something else. Anyone can dance or play silly games and have a great experience."

Ross hopes that by attending the games with their children, adults will be reminded that exercise can actually be fun — and can be something they can do together. Moderation Nation's website features "activity snack" ideas, including a relay race to weed the garden.

"You can't go wrong putting smiles on people's faces," Ross says. Especially when you're raising their heart rates at the same time. v.h.

Sweat Shirts

The Rapture has been postponed until fall. But here in D.C., it's already nearly as hot as hell. Two new T-shirts promise relief for outdoor exercisers. We tested the garments in 80-degree heat with 80 percent humidity.

CHARGED COTTON T

(Under Armour, $25)

Technology: Cotton is a strong natural fiber, but no one's ever turned it into a performance fabric, says Under Armour. Half the shirt's fibers are "charged" to repel water. Five percent lycra adds stretch and bounce.

There's built-in UPF, too.

Test result: Sweat appears in stippled patterns at first, delaying the onset of total saturation. Dry-out is faster than with regular cotton. The wonderfully soft texture (a result of a high-caliber cotton) is not compromised. Plus: No odor retention after several tests — although, eventually, the smell sticks.

ICEFIL

(New Balance, $38 short sleeve, $36 sleeveless)

Technology: "Larger dimension yarns" soak up body heat. In addition, the recycled polyester fibers are treated with Nano Aqua Chem to block sun rays and with xylitol to create a chemical reaction with moisture that cools the body.

Test result: After 20 minutes, the shirt felt warm to the touch, so maybe it was soaking up the heat we exuded. Meanwhile, we felt kind of cool. Was it the lcefil or the power of suggestion? Either way, a good deal! Minimal BO due to antimicrobial properties. MARC SILVER

Sound Bets

A Bonney Lad

It's probably safe to call Tabi Bonney the first rapper in the history of hip-hop to use the word "crochet" in a song. "My plans got crocheted," the D.C.-based Bonney spits on "Sunlight," the first single off "The Summer Years," due out in August.

The song's hook is a twist on 19thcentury Norwegian composer Edvard

Grieg's "Morning Mood," from the Henrik Ibsen play "Peer Gynt"; the song is meant to evoke a sunrise. For Bonney, "Living life like we in the sunlight" is a metaphor for the grind he's on to make it as an artist. But the Langdon Park resident is three albums and two mixtapes into a career, and yet still something of a cult act — in part because he simply doesn't chase hits.

Bonney's flow is spiked with D.C. slang — "'bammas," "cised" — and his videos are steeped in imagery from the District, and from Togo, the West African country where he was born. This regional focus might put a crochet on Bonney's world-domination plans, but Washington will be forever cised for his talent.

Dave Matthews Band, Pearl Jam and the Roots take on a new role: festival curators

Music

This summer, the rock stars aren't just headlining the music festivals — they're booking them, too.

Hip-hop vets the Roots will throw the fourth-annual Roots Picnic in Philadelphia on June 4. Chicago rock-folkies Wilco will host the second-annual Solid Sound festival in Massachusetts from June 24 to 26. And Pearl Jam will celebrate 20 years of bandhood with a twoday festival in East Troy, Wis., on Sept. 3 and 4.

With each festival come heaps upon heaps of supporting acts, all handpicked by the headliner. It's a chance for some of the biggest names in music to surround themselves with their heroes, their heirs and their friends.

The Roots, a group that can be seen canoodling with different pop musicians every weeknight on "Late Night With Jimmy Fallon," threw its first Roots Picnic in 2008; this year's event again takes place at Penn's Landing in the group's native Philadelphia. The bill features rap heroes young (Wiz Khalifa) and old (Nas), but the undercard is refreshingly hip. Jazz princess Esperanza Spalding and neo-glam troubadour Ariel Pink are scheduled to appear.

And instead of a one-day, oneoff event, Dave Matthews is throwing four three-day festivals: in Atlantic City June 24-26; in Chicago July 8-10; on New York's Governor's Island Aug. 26-28; and in George, Wash., Sept. 2-4.

Dubbed the Dave Matthews Band Caravan, these massive bills read like a movable Bonnaroo festival. Ray LaMontagne, the Flaming Lips, O.A.R. and David Gray have each signed on for the first two Caravan stops.

The bill at Pearl Jam's PJ20 festi-

"People want to connect with an artist. They want to experience bands that are all friends, that are all part of the same social network."

— GLENN PEOPLES, SENIOR EDITORIAL ANALYST AT BILLBOARD MAGAZINE

val isn't huge, but some of the names — the Strokes and Queens of the Stone Age — are. And the opening slots give a boost to unknowns (the Young Evils, thenewno2).

That fan-centric approach seems like a smart move in a challenging summer touring market. According to Pollstar, a trade publication that tracks the health of the concert industry, the top 50 tours in North America grossed 15 percent less in 2010 than in 2009. Meanwhile, the total number of concerts dropped about 3 percent.

Glenn Peoples, senior editorial analyst at Billboard magazine, thinks this might be part of the reason we're seeing a bump in artist-curated festivals: "Sometimes, just going out on tour isn't enough." CHRIS RICHARDS (THE WASHINGTON POST)

The Meaning Of Love

The artworks of Hadieh Shafie, which are on display in the exhibit "The Sweet Turning of the Page," have to be seen in person to be appreciated. What look like colorful circles — arresting, but hardly revelatory — in photographs of her art are actually thousands of rolledup scrolls, each imprinted with "eshghe," which is Farsi for "love." Morton Fine Art, 1781 Florida Ave. NW; through Fri., free; 202-628-2787, Mortonfineart.com. (U St.-Cardozo)

Ballet, the Cuban Way

It seems to be buying into a Latin American stereotype that every description of the Ballet Nacional de Cuba includes the words "fiery" or "passionate," but we can't exactly argue with it. The company will be at the Kennedy Center this week with two programs: a production of "Don Quixote" and a collection of famous dances from "Giselle," "Swan Lake" and other ballets. Kennedy Center, 2700 F St. NW; through Sun., $25-$99; 202-467-4600, Kennedycenter.org. (Foggy Bottom)

For Better or for Worse

Filmmaker Eric Rohmer, who died last year, specialized in movies about the small problems of average people. For example, Sabine, heroine of "A Good Marriage" (screening today), decides to give up her life of married lovers and find herself a husband. Fate, shockingly, does not intervene, because this is not a Kate Hudson movie. Thank goodness. AFI Silver, 8633 Colesville Road, Silver Spring; Tue., 7 p.m.; 301-495-6720, Afi.com/silver.

Dan Alper, Amanda Regner

Dan, 30, is a docketing coordinator at a law firm. Amanda, 28, is a bookstore manager. They live in Crystal City.

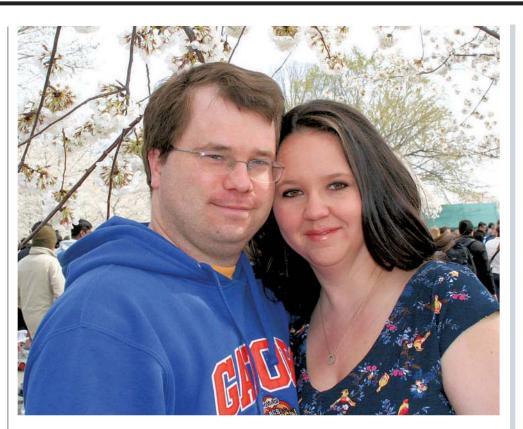

THE MAIN EVENT: June 12 in Springfield, Va. They'll sign the ketubah, the Jewish marriage contract, and break a glass.

HOW THEY MET: On Craigslist. "Amanda posted an ad asking if anyone was bored at work. I was, so I responded. We may be the only people to have achieved a sane relationship out of the Craigslist personals."

FIRST DATE: After 40 emails, they got dinner at Austin Grill in Alexandria.

HOW HE PROPOSED: At home. Amanda, distracted by her iPhone, didn't look up when Dan said, "You know I love you." Then he said, "I talked to your mom." "Then he had my full attention," Amanda says. Her first response: "Are you serious?"

MOST-HATED CLOTHING ITEM: His Slayer
T-shirt with "monster heads on it and holes in it."
PET NAMES: "Muffin," short for "Love Muffin." "One night I told her I was going to start writing songs, and my surefire hit was going to be called "(You're the Butter on My) Love Muffin."

"WE MAY BE THE ONLY PEOPLE TO HAVE ACHIEVED A SANE RELATIONSHIP OUT OF THE CRAIGSLIST PERSONALS." - DANALPER

Seth Rotramel, Katie Yaeger

Seth, 37, is a lecturer at Georgetown. Katie, 31, is an international development specialist at a nonprofit. They live in D.C.

THE MAIN EVENT: June 18 at a nature conservancy in Woodstock, Md. They're striking a balance between "chilled out" and traditional, with no assigned seating and no matching dresses for bridesmaids; a friend with a guitar will provide their ceremony music.

HOW THEY MET: A friend connected them over email. The first time they met in person was at the Black Cat for a "Prince vs. Madonna" dance party. Seth dressed for the occasion.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS: "Oh, my God, that white guy has a 'fro and turquoise pants on!"

FIRST DATE: Katie returned from a work trip to find Seth had borrowed a friend's car to pick her up from Dulles. FIRST KISS: At the airport. "The trip was worth it." Seth says.

HOW HE PROPOSED: She'd seen the ring box, but he still wanted to surprise her. He popped the question at Hains Point, during a quick break on a workday. Katie returned to her office after, but "concentration was lost."

WHEN SHE KNEW: "When we got our cat Biddy together," Katie says. "I could tell by how he treated our cat so lovingly that he was going to be a great partner."

MMM, CAKE: The "baking bridesmaids" (five of them) are making one cake each.

Ed Roberts, Kristen Schiavone

Ed, 26, is a health services administration grad student. Kristen, 26, is a special-ed teacher. They live in Silver Spring.

THE MAIN EVENT: June 18 in Rockville. They're writing their own vows, Kristen says, "with tons of help from friends and Google."

HOW THEY MET: At a friend's birthday party. Ed saw Kristen sitting by herself and sat down. "She proceeded to grill me about everything from family to politics to religion."

FIRST IMPRESSIONS: "I thought he was cute and funny." "She was intense. That has not really changed." FIRST DATE: In Baltimore, where he lived at the time, starting with happy hour in Fells Point, then dinner in

HOW HE PROPOSED: At the National Christmas Tree on Christmas Eve 2009. He arranged it so their friends were waiting with a bottle of champagne after she said yes.

MOST-HATED CLOTHING ITEM: Her beach hats "that can block out the sun for her and a crowd of 10."

WEDDING JITTERS: "I'm afraid Kristen will come to her senses and say, 'No, I'm not marrying this fool."

Horoscope

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You must keep your wits about you or you are likely to be fooled by something that is not genuine, and pass on that which is.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your take on a certain recent development may surprise the experts, but you have a knack for seeing things the way they are.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) What you do is likely to have far-reaching consequences, but this is nothing to fear. Indeed, the good can surely last a long time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You may feel as though you have nothing original to offer, but you may stumble across an opportunity that allows your creativity to soar.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-0ct. 22) You'll have a little more time to think things over than usual, and you can use that time very much to your advantage. Plans can be made.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Now is the time for you to make a stand — for or against is not the point, but rather the mere fact that you are willing to be counted.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

You're likely to hear some rumors — about you and another — that are wholly untrue. You will have to deal with them, nonetheless.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

You may be called upon to share your opinions in a much more public forum than you are accustomed to, but you have what it takes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You may be asked to carry out a task that, at first, doesn't seem to suit you at all well, but with a little time you can perform it admirably.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You are more interested in the meaning of another's behavior rather than in the behavior itself or its causes. You'll have to dig deep.

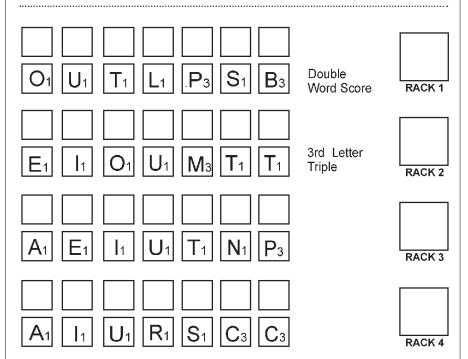

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may be willing to grant another greater authority, but still you will maintain the greater knowledge of what is going on.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may have to negotiate a little in order to arrange for yourself and your loved ones a little more of what you believe you truly deserve.

Gosh, if She'd Just Done A Song on This Topic, We Could Revel in the Irony

A representative for Amy Winehouse says the singer has checked into a treatment program in London. The 27-year-old wants to be sure she's ready to perform in Europe this summer, the rep said. It was not clear what treatment Winehouse will receive at the Priory Clinic, which offers treatment for a range of psychiatric problems. (AP)

'Why? Because I'm Famous — That's Why'

Actress Cate Blanchett is among the prominent Australians who threw their support Monday behind the unpopular government plan to tax major polluters for the carbon gas they emit. About 140 personalities and organizations signed a petition distributed to federal lawmakers supporting the government's plan to reduce greenhouse gas emissions. (AP)

Victims

LiLo's Early Work Underappreciated

Lindsay Lohan has settled a lawsuit filed by Tracie Rice, who says she was traumatized and lost her job because of Lohan. Rice was a passenger in a car driven by the mother of Lohan's former assistant. Lohan pursued the car down the Pacific Coast Highway in July 2007. The chase ended with Lohan's arrest. (AP)

PROPERTY Prince William and the former Kate Middleton, now Duchess of Cam-What an bridge, will travel thousands of miles across Canada on their first official overseas trip, from June 30 to July 8. The first event of the tour will be taking part in Canada Day celebrations on July 1 in Ottawa. Canadian taxpayers will pay for the costs associated with the visit. The newlywed couple will stay in Los Angeles July 8-10. (AP)

Injured Sean Kingston Improving After Crash

Hip-hop singer Sean Kingston has been stabilized and moved to the intensive care unit at a hospital after crashing his watercraft into a Miami Beach bridge. Kingston and a female passenger were injured when the watercraft hit the Palm Island Bridge around 6 p.m. Sunday. A passing boater saw the accident and took the two on board his vessel. (AP)
